OUR CHILDREN ARE OUR COMMON GROUND

Eugene District 4J affirms its commitment to equity and belonging

Change brings uncertainty. Education leaders in our area hear anxious questions from our families, partners and community about how changes in our country will affect our local schools that have been so well-supported and reflect the values of the community.

In Eugene School District 4J, our answer is to reaffirm our commitment to providing a safe, welcoming and inclusive learning environment — one where every student is valued, supported and challenged to reach their full potential.

At the heart of 4J's mission is a strong commitment to equity and belonging. Our district policy makes it clear:

The district prohibits discrimination and harassment on any basis protected by law, including but not limited to, an individual's perceived or actual race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national or ethnic origin, marital status, age, mental or physical disability, pregnancy, familial status, economic status, or veterans' status; or because of the perceived or actual race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national or ethnic origin, marital status, age, mental or physical disability, pregnancy, familial status, economic status, or veterans' status of any other persons with whom the individual associates.

This policy aligns with state and federal law, affirming that who you are, how you identify, and where you come from are valued and celebrated in our schools — you belong here.

We know that recent executive actions and orders have raised questions and concerns. Our team is actively reviewing each new statement, policy and action to assess how they may impact our district, students and staff.

Specifically, we are monitoring changes that may affect student services and funding for our highest-needs students. We are paying close attention to potential increases in discrimination or harm to historically and currently underserved communities, and we are reviewing alignment with federal, state and local laws as well as 4J policies and values. 4J is also engaging with leaders at the local, state and federal levels to seek clarity and advocate for our community, including emerging guidance from the Oregon Department of Education and the Oregon Governor's Office

This work takes time. Policies and legal interpretations evolve, and we want to provide you with accurate and thoughtful guidance. We will provide updates as we learn more.

Our commitment stands firm: The Eugene School District 4J Board of Directors has reinforced our commitment through district policies and resolutions:

Resolution 2024-10 reaffirms our commitment to a safe, inclusive and supportive school environment for every student, welcoming students of all national origins without barriers related to immigration or documentation status.

Resolution 2025-01 affirms gender identity, expression and equity for transgender and gender-expansive students and staff.

Oregon and 4J recognize that student health and safety are cornerstones of education and that all students are entitled to a high-quality educational experience, free from discrimination or harassment based on perceived or actual race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national or ethnic origin, marital status, age, mental or physical disability, pregnancy, familial status, economic status or veterans' status, and without fear or threat of violence.

All staff and leaders are also entitled to work in environments that are free from discrimination or harassment, and visitors should be able to participate in school activities without concern for their safety.

These are core values, and we will protect them by all legal means available.

Oregon's Every Student Belongs statute and rule requires 4J to adopt policies and procedures to respond to bias incidents. Consistent implementation of these policies is essential to ensure that all students are treated equitably.

Understandably, people seek clarity in times of uncertainty. We ask for grace as we take the time necessary to navigate a path forward with the support of a community that cares deeply about all its children and their equitable access to a caring, inclusive, high-quality education system.

We appreciate that people of many beliefs and political views have shared how much the well-being and academic achievement of all students means to them. Our children are our common ground.

Every day, schools and educators across our community create moments of magic — welcoming students with warmth, love and a commitment to excellence. Our schools are vibrant centers of learning and belonging because of the passion and dedication of our teachers and staff, families and community.

Together, we will protect and strengthen this shared treasure, striving to ensure that every student receives the very best.

Colt Gill is Eugene School District 4J's interim superintendent.

CONVEYOR BELTS AND ABLUTION ROOMS

Details emerge on planned Eugene e-commerce facility

The name of the company that will occupy a massive e-commerce distribution facility near the Eugene Airport remains a mystery, but other details of the construction project are becoming clear.

City of Eugene building permit staff are reviewing 38 blueprint/design submittals for the 320,000 square foot building that the architect, BL Companies of Connecticut, filed in January.

Eugene building permits generally are good for 360 days after they are issued, so once BL Companies secures the permits, it does not have to begin construction immediately. The project, on 84 acres of vacant land west of Highway 99, will cost $24.2 million, BL Companies told the city.

BL did not respond to Eugene Weekly emails.

The building is similar in size to Amazon e-commerce regional distribution facilities “sortation centers.” Amazon also did not respond to EW emails. On its website, BL Companies says it has constructed facilities for Amazon.

Amazon sortation centers typically have upwards of 300 workers who use conveyor systems to sort goods for delivery to customers.

Here are more new details:

The land the building would sit on is listed for sale by Eugene Commercial Real Estate for $2,495,000. The land is owned by a group of investors.

Brent McLean, a broker at Eugene Commercial Real Estate, tells the Weekly he can’t say much because he’s signed a non-disclosure agreement with the pending purchaser. He expects the sale to close possibly this fall. The property is zoned for industrial development. It’s about two miles north of the Highway 99/Randy Papé Beltline interchange. There’s been a lot of interest in the property, McLean says. “It’s because of the exposure to the highway,” he says.

The plans show 1,032 parking spaces for delivery vans, plus 408 parking spaces for employees.

The planned building will resemble a vast barn, with storage racks and conveyor belts instead of horse stalls. It’s planned as a single-story building 800 feet long, 400 feet wide and 40 feet high. At one end will be 15 loading-dock doors for semi-trucks, and there are loading doors along the sides, apparently for delivery vans to stock up.

The building’s innards consist of conveyor belts and sorting stations weaving through a dozen rows of storage shelving. EW would print some of the blueprints, but they’re copyrighted and BL Companies has not given us approval to reproduce them.

The building features a “multi-faith” prayer room and two “multi-faith ablution” rooms. Ablution is the ritual washing of hands and feet. Amazon has created these rooms at a number of its distribution centers around the country.

The parcel has 36 acres that are government-regulated wetlands. The building’s proposed location seeks to minimize wetlands filling, but some filling would still be needed, the plans show. Typically, in order to fill wetlands, a developer must create a similar amount of wetlands elsewhere, or pay a government-supervised wetlands mitigation project to do that.

Only one building in Lane County is comparable: the True Value hardware distribution center on Olympic Avenue in Springfield. That center, which trucks True Value products to hardware stores around the region, totals more than 500,000 square feet.

AMAZON CREEK’S CONCRETE CHANNEL IN SOUTH EUGENE IS BEING RESTORED TO A MORE NATURAL STATE Photo by Sadie Gustavson

AMAZON CREEK UPDATE

Removal of a section of the concrete channel surrounding Amazon Creek in south Eugene will pick up again in the summer

BY SADIE GUSTAVSON

Amazon Creek flows from its headwater in Eugene’s south hills near Spencer Butte, through town to the Long Tom River and then to the Willamette. The urban stream not only weaves through Eugene neighborhoods but is also a habitat for fish and wildlife.

The project involves removing a portion of the 66-year-old concrete channel that runs through Amazon Park enclosing the creek between 19th and 24th Avenues and planting native vegetation to restore the ecosystem. The project is on pause but will restart this summer.

Amazon Creek collects the city of Eugene’s stormwater that runs off rooftops, roads and sidewalks. The Oregon Department of Quality listed Amazon Creek as an impaired waterway under the federal Clean Water Act due to low levels of dissolved oxygen, elevated bacteria and turbidity.

The channel was constructed in the 1950s by the U.S. Army Corps to reduce the risk of urban flooding. In fact, there’s speculation the creek’s name comes from its tendency to flood widely, like its namesake Amazon River. Over time, the concrete seems to have created more problems than it solved, including impairments to water quality and rising temperatures.

“Right now, it hits the concrete, and there’s no interaction with the soil or plants. So there’s no filtering of water. There’s no maintaining of a cooler temperature,” says Shelly Miller of Eugene Parks and Open Space.

Project manager Sean Kovensky explains that the concrete channel also poses a potential hazard as large pieces have already begun to fall in the creek. “It’s best to get out ahead and remove it before it becomes a bigger issue,” Kovensky says.

Restoring Amazon Creek has been on the city of Eugene’s to-do list for quite some time. This partial restoration was part of a list of projects to be funded by the $39.35 million dollar Parks and Recreation Bond passed by voters in 2018. The majority of the funding for the restoration is coming from a $2.7 million dollar FEMA Hazard Mitigation grant to cover 75 percent of project costs.

The construction for the restoration, which was originally anticipated to be completed November 2024, has been put on pause through the winter due to weather concerns. Construction will resume on July 1, according to a quarterly report submitted to the Oregon Department of Emergency Management by the city in December.

Planting and seeding for the section of the creek that has already been excavated will continue through the winter.

Miller has a background in aquatic ecology and says she worked with her team to choose species to join the Amazon Creek’s ecosystem that are almost exclusively native and would have a high likelihood of surviving including Oregon grape, dogwood, willow and snowberry.

According to a quarterly report submitted to OEM in July, rapid rises in water levels presented safety hazards to workers, requiring a project deadline extension until December 2025, which was granted by FEMA in October.

Northwest of Eugene, the Long Tom River is the main source of Monroe’s drinking water supply. The City of Monroe Public Water System has faced a series of violations by the Oregon Health Authority for exceeding the maximum contaminant level for trihalomethanes — a harmful chemical that forms as a byproduct of disinfectants interacting with organic matter.

The Long Tom Watershed Council collects data to monitor pesticide levels found in the Amazon Creek. LTWC Habitat and Water Quality Specialist Amanda Reinholtz says that monitoring this data long-term has shown that “urban areas contribute as many or more pesticides to the water as agricultural areas.”

According to a summary of LTWC data from the past three years, some of the most frequent and concerning pesticides found in the Amazon Creek are imidacloprid, an insecticide highly toxic to aquatic bugs; diuron, a herbicide that inhibits photosynthesis; and propiconazole, a fungicide used to treat wood.

By removing the channel and planting vegetation around the creek, this project will hopefully restore a natural streambed and reduce the water temperature. With the concrete channel, the Amazon Creek gets hardly any shade, causing it to reach high temperatures in the summertime, Miller says.

“The work that we’re doing is going to allow the water to flow, have a wider flood plain and have a more natural interaction with its surroundings,” she continues.

Cooler water temperatures are beneficial for organisms living in the stream, keeping sediment out and reducing the number of pollutants.

Even if it’s just a few blocks of restoration, in the long term, folks in the community can look forward to a pleasant amenity to walk or ride a bike or skateboard by and connect with nature again, Miller says.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS, REDUCE RISKS

ESSENTIAL LEGAL TOOLS FOR IMMIGRANTS AND ALLIES BY LAUREN REGAN AND CIVIL LIBERTIES DEFENSE CENTER

For immigrant communities and their allies, knowing how to interact with cops or ICE (aka La Migra) can mean the difference between a safer life or detention and deportation. The team at Civil Liberties Defense Center has your back, and we've compiled critical resources to help people know what to say, and how to plan for a potential law enforcement or ICE interaction.

The following tools will help immigrant communities assert their rights, reduce risks and stay safer.

All of these materials — including webinar recordings, digital security guides and legal scripts — are available at CLDC.org/resources-for-immigrants-and-allies.

THE MAGIC WORDS: WHAT TO SAY & WHEN

Law enforcement (“regular cops”) and ICE/La Migra (“immigration enforcement”) rely on fear tactics, misinformation and intimidation to get people to comply with their demands. This is why the following “magic words” are crucial to keeping yourself safe.

Memorize them (ideally in English), practice them and use them in any police or ICE encounters:

“Am I being detained, or am I free to go?” / “¿Estoy siendo detenido, oficial, o estoy libre para irme?”

“I do not consent to this search.” / “Yo no consiento a um registro.”

“I want to remain silent.” / “Yo quiero permanecer callado.”

“I want a lawyer.” / “Yo quiero un abogado.”

If ICE or the police confront you, stay calm, say these words and say nothing else.

Anything you say — seemingly innocent — can be used against you or others. If you do not repeat these words, silence may provide legal consent to search and seize your stuff if you ultimately end up in court! So be sure to voice your rights out loud.

KNOW THE DIFFERENCE: ICE VS. POLICE

Understanding the difference between ICE (Immigration and Customs Enforcement) and local/state police is crucial to asserting your rights correctly.

Local and State Police

Regular cops investigate state and local crimes. They do not investigate or enforce immigration laws or policies in Oregon.

Regular cops can obtain search warrants and individualized arrest warrants from a judge — including via phone. This allows them to enter your home, workplace or car without your consent or without your knowledge or presence.

If present, you always want to say “I don’t consent to this search,” even if they are going to do it anyway. An arrest warrant is for a particular person and allows cops to take them to jail.

Police can detain you for questioning if they reasonably suspect you have committed a crime or are about to commit a crime.

However, you still have the right to remain silent and should not consent to any searches.

If arrested and charged with a crime, you have the right to a lawyer to help you — including a free lawyer if you financially qualify.

The most common way undocumented community members end up in deportation is because they are arrested by regular cops for a regular crime like driving without a driver’s license or driving under the influence of intoxicants.

Once regular cops arrest them and bring them to jail, ICE may learn of their arrest and can place an “ICE hold” on the person. This means when they are released from jail on the criminal charge, ICE will take custody of them for immigration purposes and deportation proceedings may result.

Be careful when driving on the public roadways, make sure your car is road-legal (headlights work, etc.). Don’t get arrested if possible!

ICE (LA MIGRA)

ICE cannot enter your home. You do not have to answer the door or open the door. They can’t break down the door or force entry but they can go anywhere the public would be allowed to go — a “public place” like a mall, public street or parking lot are fair game for ICE enforcement.

ICE can only obtain a judicial warrant that allows them to arrest a specific individual who is already known to ICE. But if they believe they have found other undocumented people when they come to detain the targeted person, they may be allowed to round up others at that time.

Workplace raids: ICE can only go where the public can go, so if your offices or workplace have signs saying “employees and clients only” or “no trespassing” signs, ICE can’t go there — but outdoor workers may not have those protections.

If ICE stops you at home, at work or on the streets, simply ask: “Am I being detained, or am I free to go?”

and if you are free to go, walk away slowly.

If you are being detained, state: “Why am I being detained? I don’t consent, I want a lawyer,” and then say nothing else.

If you have legal status (including DACA), you must carry and produce your proof of status if asked by ICE.

Currently, if you are jailed by ICE for immigration purposes, you are not entitled to a free lawyer and may need to retain one — so have names and numbers available.

Create a safety plan to reduce harm to you, your family and community. Fill out and sign a guardianship form filled out and signed to better protect your kids if you are jailed. Consider a power of attorney form so that loved ones can help manage your stuff if you are jailed. (Both forms are on the CLDC website.)

For allies and others: You are absolutely allowed to film ICE raids and detentions and should do so if you can. Stay a reasonable distance away from agents, but it is important to document their fascist activities.

DIGITAL SECURITY: PROTECTING YOURSELF FROM SURVEILLANCE AT WORK AND AT HOME

Government agencies — including ICE — monitor social media, phone records and cellphone location data to track and target individuals. Digital security is just as important as physical safety. The little snitch in your pocket (your cellphone) may be one of your biggest vulnerabilities when dealing with state repression.

CLDC has created digital security postcards with guidance on how to make safer choices when using digital devices, find them at EugeneWeekly.com.

NEXT STEPS: TRAIN THE TRAINER SERIES FOR IMMIGRANTS AND ALLIES

We are excited to announce that our team is working hard to bring you a “Train the Trainer Series for Immigrants and Allies” in the near future. With this six-part training series, we hope to empower and enable immigrant leaders and community allies to share this knowledge within their own networks. However, we need your support to make it happen.

Together, we can continue to build power and resilience in the face of systemic injustice.

DOCUMENTS 101

LEGAL OPTIONS FOR PEOPLE AT RISK OF DEPORTATION

BY JANICE MACKEY

There are several documents that may be important to consider if an individual is at risk of being deported.

DURABLE POWER OF ATTORNEY. Through this document, an individual can name another individual to serve as their agent or attorney-in-fact — a person who is authorized to act on your behalf.

The powers granted through a power of attorney can be extremely broad and grant the agent the ability to act on behalf of the individual in a wide variety of ways. For instance, the agent may be able to buy and sell assets, work with health insurance, life insurance, financial institutions, access investments, retirement accounts, government benefits, utilities and credit cards.

It is important that whoever is named as an agent is somebody that is 100 percent trustworthy.

The agent is considered a “fiduciary,” which means that any actions that they take need to be for the benefit of the individual or principal. In other words, the agent cannot use your assets or take any actions that are for their own benefit.

You also can sign a durable power of attorney that is limited in its scope. One of the most common limited powers of attorney is appointing somebody as an agent to sell a house or work with a particular financial institution.

It is important to note that as soon as you sign the durable power of attorney and give it to the agent, it is effective. Frequently, a power of attorney is used in the event of disability, incapacity or simply just being unable to be present for a particular transaction. But the agent is not required to show proof that the individual is unable to complete the transaction themselves.

Before signing a power of attorney, it is critical that the individual considers exactly what powers they want to give to the agent. This type of power of attorney is valid until it is revoked.

DELEGATION OF PARENTAL/GUARDIAN POWERS. Parents may sign a limited power of attorney that grants a family member or friend the custody or guardianship of their minor child.

Even though it may seem obvious that the family member or close friend should have custody of the child, this form of limited power of attorney provides documentation that the guardian has legal authority to care for and make decisions for the minor child. This can be particularly important when working with school officials or health care providers.

It is also important if there may be a conflict as to who should have custody — for instance, if two family members both want custody of the child, or the proposed individual is not a family member. A separate power of attorney needs to be done for each child.

This type of power of attorney is valid for only six months. If the custody will extend beyond six months, a new one will need to be executed. It also may be revoked at any time.

NOMINATION OF GUARDIAN. Another document to consider for minor children is a nomination of legal guardian.

While a formal court proceeding is still necessary to appoint a legal guardian, the nomination of guardianship allows a parent to specify who should be the guardian of the child if a formal appointment is necessary. A formal guardianship proceeding should be considered depending on the age of the child. For instance, if the custody is likely to extend for years, this will avoid the necessity of executing a new limited power of attorney every six months.

The downside is that guardianship proceedings are not inexpensive, as attorneys are generally needed to complete and file the petition with the court. Another negative is that it will require a petition to the court to terminate the guardianship.

The limited power of attorney to grant temporary custody may be an immediate option until a formal guardianship proceeding is initiated if it is necessary.

There are online resources to assist or to provide additional information on either the limited power of attorney or guardianship: Go to Courts.oregon.

gov and search the words “guardianship or power of attorney.” This site also provides a form to complete for the limited power of attorney to delegate parental/guardian powers. In other words, no attorney is required to complete the limited power of attorney form.

RESOURCES FOR LGBTQIA+ COMMUNITY MEMBERS AND ADVICE FOR ALLIES

BY BROOKS MCLAIN AND MAX SKORODINSKY

For many members of marginalized communities, including those who are LGBTQIA+, the last few months, and especially the last few weeks, have felt like a nightmarish fever dream — bizarre, surreal and terrifying.

How could it come to this? While this current moment is particularly bleak and it seems like all progress made in the last 60 years is potentially rolled back, all is not yet lost. It is essential that we come together and use all the tools we have to resist and fight back.

To start, executive orders do not carry the weight of laws passed by Congress, and many of these orders will be overturned by the courts. A majority of federal judges were appointed by a Democratic president and most cases won't make it to the conservative Supreme Court. Many of these orders are designed to intimidate and have us give up our rights pre-emptively.

Don't fall for it. Trans/gender diverse and queer people still have many of our rights — especially, at the state level in Oregon. This includes parentage and adoption rights, the right to update your birth certificate and change your name and gender marker on your Oregon ID as well as protections from housing and employment discrimination.

At this moment, we need to be here for each other. If you are LGBTQIA+, there are many local resources that are available to support trans/gender diverse and queer individuals and groups. In what turned out to be fortuitous timing, The Lavender Network, Eugene's LGBTQ+ community center, opened its doors the day before the November election; housing five local nonprofits.

At the center, TransPonder operates Sylvia's Closet, where folks can access gender affirming products, and Queer Eugene maintains a clothing closet, where people can obtain clothing that matches their gender identity — both for no-cost. Additionally, HIV Alliance offers HIV testing and PrEP navigation (for HIV prevention medication) and, along with TransPonder, peer support services.

TransPonder also offers a food program, employment preparedness and assistance to community members who need help updating their documents to reflect their correct name and gender identity. Allies — consider a financial contribution to these organizations and efforts.

Social events and meetings are also happening at The Lavender Network, including planning for the 2025 Eugene Pride Festival June 28 at the Lane Events Center.

With our Pride Festival falling in Pride month this year, it's a great opportunity for local businesses, nonprofits, schools, organizations, and city and county leaders to show loud, proud and visible support for the community all month long. Volunteering during the event is another way to show support and allyship.

Allies, you must follow through on your words and leverage your privilege to slow and hopefully prevent the descent into authoritarianism. Interrupt racist or transphobic comments or actions when you encounter them. Volunteer in ways that support the communities you seek to ally yourself with, or donate to the cause. Don't accommodate bad behavior and creeping fascism, and do have your actions match your words. Get involved in, elevate and support mutual aid efforts.

We are not facing anything new, and we owe it to those who came before us to push the fight forward.

Our rights have been self-determined, not given; something trans and queer ancestors like Marsha P. Johnson and Sylvia Rivera fought fiercely to attain. We can't give up on their legacy nor shirk away from defending our rights and the rights of future generations.

When Angela Davis was asked by a young activist during a lecture last year at the University of Oregon how to remain hopeful when everything seems so bleak, her response was: "The work of organizing radical movements is the work of generating hope. This is why we need art. This is why we need music."

Make music and art, celebrate, be visible and create hope. Identify and strengthen connections with your people. Lean on each other and hold the line.

EW OFFICE DOG BIGGIE PITBULL MADE IT THROUGH THE TORT ROUND OF THE JORIAD IN 2015. Photo by Camilla Mortensen

FEB 8

Truffles may be a delicacy enjoyed around the world, but we owe compliments not only to the chef who prepared the dish, but also the dog who found the truffle. That's right, dogs around North America have been trained in the fine art of truffle hunting and they are heading to the Lane Events Center Feb. 8 to compete in The Joriad North American Truffle Dog Championship. The Joriad, run by the Oregon Truffle Festival, is the only competition of its kind in North America. "The Oregon Truffle Festival and The Joriad lay the foundations for a thriving truffle industry in Oregon," says Charles Lefevre, Oregon Truffle Festival co-founder and member of its Board of Directors. The competition consists of three rounds. The first round is called the TORT, or truffle odor recognition test. In this round, the dogs are presented with 17 trays, and of those 17, five have a scented target. The dogs must successfully identify the five trays with truffles to move on to the next round. The second round is a hunt in the arena. The arena is divided into separate areas, each with a certain number of hidden targets. The dogs must race against the clock to find five targets within each area and the top five fastest competitors advance to the final round. In the final round, which is not open to spectators due to the secret location, the dogs are tested in a real truffle patch. The dog who collects the most truffles in one hour is crowned the champion. — Bailey Meyers

The Joriad North American Truffle Dog Championship is 9 am Saturday, Feb. 8, at the Lane Events Center, 796 West 13th Avenue. Tickets are $20 in advance at OregonTruffleFestival.org or $25 at the door.

A foster care program for youth in Oregon who identify as LGBTQIA+

A supported and committed foster parent can help turn a child's life around! OCP's foster care uses research-based intervention to support youth who've experienced trauma and disruption to give them the safety and consistency they deserve.

OCP is seeking affirming foster families who are willing to nurture and protect the health, safety, and well-being of these young people. It is essential to provide stable, supportive, and welcoming families for LGBTQ+ adolescents, where youth can develop the strength and self-confidence they need to become successful adults.

FEB 8 Depression, suicide, mental illness, a HGTV reality TV series. Not typical fodder for comedy, except perhaps for that last one, but Aaron Foster, a Reno-based stand-up comedian, draws on all those things and more in his new one-hour show, Mostly Jokes. Foster is a Hollywood survivor who, more than a decade ago, had a small career acting, performing comedy and — as mentioned earlier — hosting an HGTV reality series, a home renovation makeover show called FreeStyle. Burning out on the industry, Foster — with a sly smile and TV doctor good looks — tried his hand at a sports nutrition business in Boulder, Colorado, and then restaurants in Nevada, which he has since sold. Foster returned to stand-up comedy in 2021, developing Mostly Jokes, which premiered last June at The Hollywood Fringe Festival to rave reviews. In the show, “I talk about my issues with depression and anxiety,” Foster tells Eugene Weekly in a phone call. “I talk about my bipolar abusive father. I talk about my schizophrenic brother who passed away,” he says, mentioning comedian Mike Birbiglia as an influence. In the show, Foster also jokes about show biz struggles and life after 50. “I was recently diagnosed with clinical depression,” Foster quips in a recent Instagram clip. “I’m pretty sad about it,” he says. Despite those dark topics — or perhaps because of them — Foster is winning and assured on stage and hopes to give Hollywood one more go. Of performing, he says, “It’s the place I feel most comfortable.” — Will Kennedy

Aaron Foster’s Mostly Jokes is 8 pm Saturday, Feb. 8, at Art House, 492 East 13th Avenue. Tickets are $15 at MostlyJokes.com or at the door.

HIKING

OREGON'S HIPPIE ISLAND

Revisiting the 1960s in Greece BY WILLIAM L. SULLIVAN

Matala, a quiet beach village on the Greek island of Crete, became an international hang-out for the flower children of the 1960s. A surprising number of kids from Oregon joined in the happening.

George Harrison, the hippest Beatle, camped in a cave here. Singer/songwriter Joni Mitchell told of her stay in her hit song, “Carey”:

*The wind is in from Africa
Last night I couldn't sleep
Oh, you know it sure is hard to leave here, Carey*

But it's really not my home
My wife Janell and I were never exactly hippies, but we did backpack through Crete years ago, and liked the place so much that we recently returned.

History is as layered here as the cave-riddled strata that tilts into Matala's emerald green bay. Ruins on the south shore of Crete predate the Egyptian pyramids by half a millennium. The city of Phaestos, now a maze of stone ruins on a hilltop near town, was a bustling provincial capital for the Minoan civilization in 2000 BC, long before the great temples of Athens' acropolis arose.

With the Roman conquest of Crete in 69 BC, the capital moved a few miles east to Gortina, where a stone amphitheater remains. Germans occupied the island in World War II, but faced resistance from armed Cretan partisans.

In contrast, locals greeted the invasion of hippies in the 1960s with bemusement and their traditional hospitality — at least at first.

Bright-eyed girls in bikinis and long-haired boys with guitars tumbled off the dusty bus from Heraklion. They filled liter bottles with red wine at the tavernas and set up housekeeping in the ancient caves above the beach.

Locals disagree about who originally chiseled out these multi-room caverns. Some say they were used as tombs for early Christians. Others argue that they more closely resemble dwellings, perhaps for workers at the seaport for Phaestos.

Everyone agreed that the caves had been abandoned for ages. Why not let these strange foreign guests camp there?

Barbara Haynes now lives with her husband in a cabin on Oregon's Umpqua River, but in 1968 she was hitchhiking through Europe with two other 20-year-old women. To save money on the ferry to Crete they slept on the deck.

As for Matala itself, Haynes says, “My memories are pretty sketchy. I know I visited the caves, but I think I slept on the beach. I do have a very clear memory of a Greek extended family at the beach one day.”

Haynes recalls being surprised that the family buried a tiny old woman, presumably a great-grandmother, in the hot sand, leaving just her face exposed. They provided her with shade and tended her lovingly. “At the time it was curious but now, as an old woman myself, I realize it was to soothe her aching body.”

Mitchell was less fond of the accommodations in Matala.

*My fingernails are filthy
I got beach tar on my feet
And I miss my clean white linen
And my fancy French cologne*

What kept Mitchell in Matala was a burly, limping Greek cook named Carey. As she later retold the story, she had been eating chocolate and oranges on the beach. She put her garbage in a bag, walked into the nearest cafe, and told the man behind the counter to dispose of it.

Without a word Carey emptied the bag across the floor of his restaurant.

“I liked him at once,” Mitchell later recalled.

Today olive groves still dot the red hillsides of Matala with green. Boats in the bay still cast shadows on the seafloor through water clear as glass.

Hippies no longer live in the caves. When locals finally tired of the garbage and sewage from what had essentially become a homeless encampment, the Greek Army cleared out the foreign kids. You can now visit the caves between 10 am and 4 pm for a fee.

Still, Matala has not turned its back on its hippie heyday. A VW bug with flower decals is parked at the city's entrance. Locals maintain a giant 1960s graffiti slogan on the sea wall, “Today Is Life, Tomorrow Never Comes.” Every June the town hosts a Beach Festival, when free paint is provided for people who want to decorate the main street's pavement.

Matala remains a laid-back place, a cross between the Oregon Country Fair and the coastal kitsch of Depoe Bay. Even if you never did the hippie thing, the sunshine of Matala makes it easy to slip into a nostalgic groove of peace, love, and a world without war.

Mitchell, too, felt how hard it was to leave the idyll of southern Crete. She sang,

*The night is a starry dome
And they're playin' that scratchy rock and roll*

Beneath the Matala moon

SAVAGE Love BY DAN SAVAGE

QUICKIES

1. It turns me on when my husband fucks other men. It pisses him off when I do. His proposed “fix” is he gets to fuck other men (because I like it), but I don’t get to fuck other men (because he hates it). This hardly seems fair.

If things are unfair turned you on — if the idea of being in a one-sided open relationship made your cock hard — you might be able to make this work. But unfairness doesn't turn you on, so you can't make this work. I don't mean you can't make your marriage work; I mean your husband's proposed “fix” won't work because you aren't a cuck. So, your options are a mutual agreement to close your relationship (no one gets to fuck other men) or agreeing to a one-sided DADT relationship (he doesn't hide fucking other men from you, you hide fucking other men from him). Your husband getting the fuck over himself is also an option.

2. How do I get my libido back after my house burned down in the L.A. fires?

“You don't get your libido back — at least not yet,” says Claire Perelman, a Certified Sex Therapist who lives and works in California. “You sit in the grief, you let it wash over you. When you're ready, you turn towards pleasure and comfort, however you find it — naked cuddling, drawing yourself a bath, sensual touch. You can even invite grief into your bedroom: a threesome with you, your partner, and despair. Acknowledging the pain is the first step in moving through it.” Follow Claire Perelman on Instagram and Threads @sexclarified.

3. Tips or tricks for orgasms on SSRIs?

Throw absolutely everything you've got at it — genital stim, nipple stim, anal stim, brain stim (aka dirty talk), inert toys, vibrating toys — and enjoy the ride/getting ridden whether you have an orgasm or not. If you feel yourself getting close, push a little. If you don't feel like you're gonna get there, appreciate the pleasure you created and experienced instead of succumbing to frustration over the orgasm you didn't have this time but might next time. (Also, talk to your doc about adjusting your medications.)

4. What's the craziest sex you've ever had?

Bent over in an East German guard tower on Nov. 12, 1989, looking down through the orange-tinted mirrored glass windows at the delirious crowd of Berliners tearing the Wall apart with their bare hands.

5. How can I have sex when my 18-year-old stepdaughter is home? It makes my boyfriend uneasy!

Instead of going without when your stepdaughter is around, why not go and get in your car or go lock yourself in the bathroom of a sleazy bar or go climb into an abandoned East German guard tower and have sex there? Then instead of resenting your boyfriend's daughter for preventing you from having sex, you'll be grateful to this kid — secretly grateful — for all the exciting, crazy, adventurous sex you're having all over town with her dad.

6. What's the best way to let a new partner know I'm inexperienced in the bedroom?

You can show 'em or you can tell 'em. And since there's nothing more deflating than the look on someone's face as they slowly realize you don't know what you're doing, telling is by far the better choice. Remember: low expectations are easily exceeded.

7. My boyfriend expressed interest in butt stuff while drunk but denied it when sober. Should I drop it?

Make sure there's always beer in the fridge and trust that your boyfriend will bring up butt stuff when he's ready/drunk.

8. Do you need to disclose that you slept with someone that used to have HPV?

No.

FREE WILL Astrology

BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The world's largest mirror isn't an actual mirror. It's Bolivia's Salar de Uyuni salt flat, a vast area that's almost perfectly flat. After a rain, a thin layer of calm water transforms the surface into a perfect reflector that can be used to calibrate observation satellites. In these conditions, it may be almost impossible to tell where the earth begins and the sky ends. I foresee metaphorically similar developments for you during the coming weeks. Boundaries between different aspects of your world — professional and personal, spiritual and practical — might blur in interesting ways. A temporary dissolution of the usual limits may offer you surprising insights and unexpected opportunities for realignment. Be alert for helpful clues about how to adjust the way you see things.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): From day to day, glaciers appear static. But they are actually slow-moving rivers of ice that have tremendous creative power. They can make or reshape valleys, moving tons of dirt and rock. They pulverize, grind, and topple trees, hills and even mountains. New lakes may emerge in the course of their activity. I invite you to imagine yourself as a glacier in the coming months, Taurus. Exult in your steady transformative power. Notice and keep track of your slow but sure progress. Trust that your persistence will ultimately accomplish wonders and marvels.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): In recent weeks, have you stirred up any dynamic fantasies about exotic sanctuaries or faraway places or mercurial wild cards? Have you delivered enticing messages to inspiring beauties or brave freedom-fighters or vibrant networkers? Have you been monitoring the activities of longshots or future helpers or unification adepts who might be useful to you sooner than you imagine? Finally, Gemini, have you noticed I'm suggesting that everything important will arise in threes — except when they come in twos, in which case you should hunt for the missing third? PS: When the wild things call to you, respond promptly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Archaeologists found two 43,000-year-old flutes in Germany. Constructed of mammoth ivory and bird bone, they still produce clear notes with perfect pitch. They were located in a cave that contains ancient examples of figurative art. Some genius way back then regarded art and music as a pleasurable pairing! I propose we make these instruments your power symbols for the coming weeks, Cancerian. May they inspire you to resuscitate the value of your past accomplishments. May you call on the help of melodies and memories that still resonate — and that can inspire your future adventures! Your words of power are regeneration, revival and reanimation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It's your unbirthday season, Leo — the holiday that's halfway between your last birthday and your next. During this interlude, you could benefit from clarifying what you don't want, don't believe, and don't like. You may generate good fortune for yourself by going on a quest to discover rich potentials and stirring possibilities that are as-yet hidden or unexpressed. I hope you will be bold enough to scan the frontiers for sources of beauty and truth that you have been missing. During your unbirthday season, you will be wise to gather the rest of the information you will need to make a smart gamble or daring change.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Austrian playwright Elfriede Jelinek won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 2004, and Romanian-German author Herta Müller earned it in 2009. But garnering the world's most prestigious award for writers did not provide a big boost to their book sales. In some markets, their famous works are now out of print. In 2025, I hope you Virgos do in your own spheres what they only half-accomplished in theirs. I would love for you to gather more appreciation and attention while simultaneously raising your income. According to my reading of the astrological omens, this is a reasonable expectation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): By day, Libra-born Forrest Bess (1911-1977) worked as a commercial fisherman in Texas. By night, he created visionary paintings inspired by symbols that appeared to him in states between sleeping and waking. Other influences in his art came from alchemy, the psychological philosophy of Carl Jung, and Indigenous Australian rituals. His life was living proof that mystical exploration and mundane work could coexist. I'm hoping he might serve you as an inspirational role model. You are in a phase when you have the power to blend and synergize seemingly opposing aspects of your world. You would be wise to meditate on how to find common ground between practical necessity and spiritual aspiration. Are there ways you can unite the desires of your head and heart? Of your need for safety and your longing for adventure? Of your craving for beauty and your fondness for usefulness?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The first emperor of China, Qin Shi Huang, arranged for himself to be buried after death with an army of 8,000 soldiers made from terracotta, which is a clay ceramic. Joining the gang below the earth's surface were 770 horses and 130 chariots. For over 2,000 years, this assemblage was lost and forgotten. But in 1974, farmers digging a new well found it accidentally. In this spirit, I am predicting that sometime in the next five months, you will make interesting discoveries while looking for something other than what you find. They won't be as spectacular as the terracotta army, but I bet they will be fun and life changing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Author Zora Neale Hurston said, "There are years that ask questions and years that answer." I will adjust that counsel for your use, Sagittarius. According to my astrological analysis, the first half of 2025 will ask questions, and the second half will answer them. For best results, I invite you to gather and polish your best questions in the next five months, carefully defining and refining them. When July begins, tell life you are ready to receive replies to your carefully wrought inquiries.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Hemoglobin is an iron-bearing protein that's crucial to most life. It enables the transportation of oxygen in the blood. But one species, the icefish of the Antarctic seas, lacks hemoglobin. They evolved other ways to obtain and circulate enough oxygen in the frozen depths, including larger hearts and blood vessels. The system they've developed works well. So they are examples of how to adjust to an apparent problem in ways that lead to fine evolutionary innovations. I suspect you're now in the midst of your own personal version of a comparable adaptation. Keep up the good work!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Born under the sign of Aquarius, Clyde Tombaugh discovered the heavenly body known as Pluto in 1930. This was years before he earned advanced degrees in astronomy. His early education was primarily self-directed. The telescopes he used to learn the sky were built from tractor parts and old car components from his father's farm. During the coming months, I surmise there will be elements of your life resembling Tombaugh's story. Your intuition and instincts will bring you insights that may seem unearned or premature. (They're not!) You will garner breakthroughs that seem to be arriving from the future.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One of the world's deepest caves is Vryovkina in the nation of Georgia. At its lowest, it's 7,257 feet down. There are creatures living there that are found nowhere else on earth. I propose we make it your symbolic power spot for now. In my astrological opinion, you will be wise to dive further into the unknown depths than you have in quite some time. Fascinating mysteries and useful secrets await you. Your motto: "Go deeper and deeper and deeper."
